FABIOLA MENCHELLI

UNDER the BLUE SUN

March 13 - April 4, 2021

The gallery is pleased to present an intimate survey of photographic works by Mexico City-based artist Fabiola Menchelli, her first solo exhibition on the West Coast. Utilizing a diverse range of processes, Menchelli explores the contemplative influence of internal and external space. This exhibition presents work from two different periods that connect the underlying ideas in Menchelli's work, using the language of abstraction to reinterpret space through the medium of photography.

In 2015, an observatory at Casa Wabi in Oaxaca became Menchelli's source of inspiration for two recent bodies of work. Designed by Tadao Ando as a site for deep contemplation, the concrete structure's aperture is abstracted using multiple exposures in Menchelli's series of monochromatic echoes (Ellipse, 2015) and cyanotypes (Bajo el Sol Azul, 2017). The resulting works on view speak to her continual investigations about the poetics of space, observation and light.

The following pages include works in the exhibition, Under the Blue Sun, on view at Marshall Contemporary through April 4th.

Photography by Fabiola Menchelli.

In Bajo el Sol Azul, the artist translates the curvature and contemplative experience of the physical space, reconnecting the concrete structure of the observatory to the sky it was designed to observe. Deep blues and misty gradients of light only hint at the structure within, allowing the void of space beyond to invite reflection.

Ellipse exists as an interconnected group of seven double-exposure prints that reverberate across separate panels like the waves crashing just outside Ando's observatory, initiating a visual dialogue larger than the sum of its parts.

"The series seeks to awake a reflection on the bond between human beings; how a stronger space is constructed in community, the same way an image meets another sibling image, and they connect."

Fabiola Menchelli began working with cyanotypes in 2014, a process that connects the history of photography with architecture through its early use in blueprints dating back to the late 19th century. As an artist in residence at the Bemis Center for Contemporary Arts, she produced a series of unique darkroom-based, angular abstractions including two prints in the exhibition.

Lastly, a series of Polaroid prints also made at Casa Wabi, shown for the first time, capture the influence of the Light & Space and Constructivism art movements in Menchelli's contemporary practice.
